

The book you're about to read has no author, no designer, no typesetter, no distribution channel. Nevertheless, you have it in front of you. How did that happen?

POwr, Broccoli and Kopimi

Manifestos for the Internet Age is a reader that collects manifestos of computer culture, starting with Ted Nelson's Computer Lib, proceeding through the GNU Manifesto and the Hacker Manifesto, up to current positions such as The Cult of Done, the Cryptoparty Manifesto, the Critical Engineering Manifesto, and many other writings from both artists and activists.

Manifestos for the internet age

Manifestos for the internet age

greyscale press

